Charity Challenge Returns to Daniel Island's Park Day Festival
Winner to receive $5,000 for charity of choice
Saturday, October 11, 2008
12:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

CHARLESTON, S.C. – On Saturday, October 11, the Park Day Charity Challenge makes its return to Daniel Island. This competitive event gives area businesses an excellent opportunity to show off their philanthropic spirit and team building skills in an exciting and entertaining field game competition. The event will be limited to twenty teams of four and will include five fun and slightly competitive games all themed after well-known Daniel Island activities and events. The winner of the Charity Challenge will be awarded $5,000 to benefit the company's designated charity, while second and third place finishers will receive $1,000 and $500 for their chosen beneficiaries.

“Argh! This year's event will accentuate the Pirate culture and history that Charleston once experienced”, said John Girault, the event coordinator. “We are building upon the success of last year's event and anticipate filling all 20 team spots by early September.”

Now in its eighth year, Park Day has become a fall tradition in Charleston. A fun-filled festival featuring activities, events, food and live music for the entire family, Park Day has evolved into one of Charleston's broadest scope charitable events.

Teams can register with a $500 sponsorship fee. To participate in the Charity Challenge, please call John Girault at (843) 452-8621 or email parkday@danielisland.com. For more information on Park Day, visit www.danielislandparkday.com.
